Intranet Concepts Announces a New Focus

SharePoint and Web-based training will serve agencies well into the future

Newburyport, Massachusetts, October 1, 2009 – Intranet Concepts has always encouraged the enterprising spirit in all of its employees, and is pleased to announce that one of their founding partners, Kim Floyde, is leaving the company to launch her own web design company.

Kim has been building and maintaining websites since 1997 and is excited about taking her skills in this new direction. Effective October 1, she will step away from the day-to-day management of Intranet Concepts, Inc. and launch Aspenglow Services, LLC specializing in website design and support for insurance agencies and other small businesses throughout the United States and Canada.

“With this change comes a new focus on intranets and educational opportunities that have always been a cornerstone of Intranet Concepts,” said Paul Reynolds, President of Intranet Concepts, Inc. “We developed AgencyCentral, the first intranet product especially for insurance agencies, back in 1999. While it is still a very functional product today, being used in over 300 agencies nationwide, the newest version of AgencyCentral takes full advantage of Microsoft SharePoint 2007 technology, which enables the user to update their intranet directly in their Web browser, thus eliminating the need for third-party software.”

Coastal Computer Clarity, a strategic partner of Intranet Concepts, is poised to expand their scope of both Internet-based and classroom training to accommodate agencies who are migrating to the newer Office 2007 and SharePoint platforms. Customized classes are also available for agencies who wish to custom-tailor the learning experience for their staff.
